

While we used to think that deep wrinkles and furrows in the face were caused by loose skin, new research has shown it is actually due to a loss of fat in the skin. Fortunately, there is a safe and natural approach that provides dramatic results for improving the appearance of facial lines, wrinkles, and folds using fat harvested from your own body. This procedure is referred to as micro-lipoinjection, fat injection, facial fat rejuvenation, or most commonly, Fat Transfer.

What is Fat Transfer?

Fat Transfer is the process of removing surplus fat from areas of your body, such as the buttocks, stomach or thighs, and implanting this fat where needed. This natural procedure avoids the risk of infection and rejection that can happen with other fillers.

The most commonly treated areas for Fat Transfer include:

- Frown and laugh lines.
- Acne or trauma scars.
- Brow lines.
- Upper lip and between the nose.
- Lips - to increase the volume of thinning lips.
- Chin, cheeks, and jaw line to improve facial contouring and definition.
- Eyes - to correct hollow or sunken eyes.

How many treatments will I need?

Since the fat injected into your body is absorbed over a period of time, you may require repeat injections. The first injection normally lasts up to six months. The remaining fat may last for years, but this usually requires three or four treatments over a six-month period. When the effect of your injection begins to diminish, you can schedule another fat injection.
